FOREWORD

THE coat-of-arms cut is the donation of Mrs. Frank C. Smith of Worcester.

The printing of the pamphlet is the donation of Charles M. Cox of Melrose.

The work of research and compilation was done by Edward Jones Cox of 64 Brooks Ave., Newtonville, (although the names and dates in the 6th, 7th and 8th generations were obtained from the family record, so long faithfully kept by Mrs. Olive A. Perry). He desires to receive additions and corrections, and will send to all who request it, a directory of addresses of all living cousins, hoping that pleasant correspondence and local reunions will result. Hearty thanks are extended to all who assisted in furnishing information.

Extra copies on request. The original intention was to furnish copies free, but so many have said they would feel more comfortable to pay something for it, that any amount you prefer to send will not be refused.

E. J. C.

and I had to leave with a very heavy heart and a very heavy load.

I have not a moment's peace of mind
 since I left the house.

My heart is full of sorrow and pain and I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.

I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.
 I have been so happy and content
 and now I feel that I have lost a part of myself.

The coat-of-arms is that of William Colburn, a pursuivant of The Herald's College under Queen Mary, and a (York) herald under Queen Elizabeth, who died in 1567. His arms, with his pennon, hangs in St. Martin's Church, London.

SHIELD

Argent (silver), on a chevron (house peak, signifying a freeholder), gules (red), between three bugle horns sable (black), stringed (tied in a bow), of the second as many mullets (rowels of a spur) pierced (perforated in the centre) or (gold).

CREST

MOTTO

Constans fidei. (Faithful to trust) or (Constant to faith).

THE COLBURN FAMILY OF WEST DEDHAM, (WESTWOOD), MASS.

Some of the Colburns derive the name from "cold", and "burn", meaning "cold brook." Others even from "coal" and "burn". It is found in many spellings, and is sometimes shortened into "Coburn". But the late Rev. George H. Gordon of Somerville, an expert genealogist whose large amount of material for an (unpublished) genealogy of the Colburn Family is in the possession of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society of Boston, told the writer that the name was of Viking origin, the syllable "Col" meaning in the Norse mythology one of the minor gods, and "burn" meaning "a soldier," hence "Colburn" means a soldier of the god "Col". This same syllable is in Cologne, a city founded by the Norsemen, and Columbus, whose family, though resident in Italy, were of Norse descent, and, according to him, all refer to this minor god. He said he got this from books in Latin which are in the library of Harvard College.

The most noted in England of this name is John Colburne, who was born in 1776. He served with distinction under Wellington in the Peninsular Campaign in Spain, as Colonel of the 52nd (Oxfordshire) regiment, in the battles of Corunna, Albuera, Ciudad Rodrigo, Nivelle, Nive, Orthes, and Toulouse. At Waterloo, his swinging his regiment as the French Old Guard made their charge, in such a way as to overlap the head of the column and break their formation, was the critical moment of the battle—the beginning of the downfall of Napoleon. The British sergeant in charge of the battlefield points out the exact spot. Colburne was afterward appointed governor general of Canada, where Port Colburne on Lake Huron is named in his honor. He was entitled Lord Seaton with the rank of Baron. He was given the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath in 1838, was made general in 1854, and commander of the military forces in Ireland in 1855. He died in 1865. (Dictionary of Biography).

There were three immigrant Colburns to this country, William of Boston, Robert of Dracut, and our Nathaniel of Dedham. No relationship between them has ever been established. They may have come from the northeast coast of England, for on one of the Danish invasions of England, the Danes who remained there on a branch of the Humber River, at a place called Cattaraick, gave the name Colburn to a locality in the "Hundred of Hang", and it has kept it ever since, a postoffice being there now of that name.

The number of Colburns all over the United States must be very large, but this record is confined to the descendants of Isaac Colburn, Jr., of West Dedham, after showing his descent from the immigrant Nathaniel.

The Colburns like their neighbors, from the time of the Winthrop immigration to the present generation, were people of great practical efficiency. The men "cleared land, cut wood, made rails and posts, built stone walls; built barns and sheds, made simple furniture and farm utensils, involving carpentry, blacksmithing, and painting; cared for bees, poultry, sheep, cattle, horses; could break colts and steers; could milk, shear sheep, and butcher; could plough, plant, cultivate, and harvest vegetables; could sow, mow, reap, thresh and winnow grain; could read the sky, tell birds, wild animals, insects and common plants and trees at sight; could plant, prune, and graft trees; make vinegar, and maple syrup and candy; cure ham and bacon; fish, trap and hunt successfully; make shoes, harnesses, and simple tools; weave baskets, make kites, bow guns, darts, whistles, &c., for the children; repair anything; make a telling speech at town meeting," serve well in war, and in town offices.

The women "understood all phases of housework, sweeping, dusting, washing ironing; could cook, make yeast, soap, candles, butter, cheese, sausages, preserves of all sorts; candy, ale, beer, wines, and cordials; could spin yarn from wool, and thread from flax; dye and knit, weave and embroider; shrink and bleach cloth; cut and make ordinary garments darn and mend anything well; braid rugs, paper a room, cut hair; gather medical herbs, nurse the sick, rear large families; manage a flower garden, and have potted plants bloom all winter indoors; milk, make hay, and have all the children clean and neatly dressed at church on time, Sunday morning."

The boys "brought in wood, collected eggs, brought in water from spring or well, fed regularly, every day, chickens, pigs, cattle and horses; drove the cows to pasture in the morning and home again at night; suckled the calves, rubbed down the colts, weeded gardens, cut wood, spread hay, picked berries, husked corn, did endless chores of all sorts."

The girls helped in many of these, also "tended babies, washed dishes, dusted, made beds, swept, knitted, mended, washed, made soap, butter, preserves, and cooked."

"From helping mother from love for her, in tasks of no moment, to helping father for love of the family, in tasks of consequence, the boy was promoted to tasks of such importance that the lives of helpless creatures depended upon his fidelity to duty. A similar promotion awaited the girl from the day she began to care for her doll clothes to the day she began to prepare her own bridal outfit."

The old self-supporting home was at once a school of training for practical life and a discipline for character. Out of it came the sturdy New England spirit, which "was daunted by no obstacle, got full information, and then went the limit" in achieving those conquests of nature, and of European tyranny and diplomacy which have made America what it is, "founded on home, school and church". All honor to our sturdy and worthy ancestors.

Also appointed Tything man. He was deputed a great many times to settle land disputes, or to lay out ways and land lots. He joined the church in 1641, "after long and much inquisition into his case". He accumulated considerable property, and bequeathed a house in Dedham Village, two at Roxbury Plain, a farm at Medfield, and (in our line) a farm at West Dedham, "lying beyond the Great Rocks Westward." The old house stood till about 1900, Capt. Isaac Colburn being born there, but it passed out of our line by bequest to his son Eliphalet. It was last known as the "Aunt Cynthy house", and "probably built as early as 1700." He was ancestor, through his son Samuel, of Warren Colburn, superintendent of graded schools in Lowell, Mass., who originated the present system of graded schools, and author of the celebrated "Warren Colburn's Intellectual Arithmetic", (excelled in translation and use in America, Europe and Asia by the Bible and Uncle Tom's Cabin only).

He married PRISCILLA CLARKE of Dedham, and had

Sarah	Rebecca	Nathaniel	Priscilla	John	Mary	Hannah
1640	1642	1644	1646	1648	1650	1652
	Samuel	Deborah	Benjamin	JOSEPH
	1654	1656	1659	1662

2ND GENERATION

LIEUTENANT JOSEPH COLBURN

11th child of Nathaniel

1690, he received "ten shillings in Corn for killing a Wolfe." 1693, Surveyor, several years. 1695, Constable. 1698, deputed to run the Medfield line, also killed two wolves. 1700, "is agreed with to provide timber and make and set up a good sufficient Pound for the use of the Town" for 40 shillings. Also on committee "in repayering the meeting house." 1701, chosen "to run the line about ffool Medow" with Dorchester. 1702, "on Comity to seat persons in the Meeting house." 1703, deputed to lay out a cart way from the Medfield road. 1704, appointed Tything man, also deputed "to renew the Medfield bounds marks." He inherited part of his father's West Dedham farm.

"Paid Lt. Joseph Colburn & Comp. that served her Majestie from the 20th of August to the 20th of September, 1706. 36 No., 10 s., 10 d." "Paid John Darbyshire that served as Pilot under Lt. Joseph Colbourn from September the 4th to the 17th, 1706, 14 s." He left in his will a gun, and "my sword". Died 1718.

He married MARY HOLBROOK of Braintree, Mass., and had

JOSEPH
1687

(The above Pound is represented on the Town Seal of Westwood, which was designed by his descendant, Lucius Damrell).

3RD GENERATION

CAPTAIN JOSEPH COLBURN

Only Child of Lt. Joseph

He married MEHITABLE WHITING of Dedham, and had

Joseph	Mary	Isaac	Timothy	ISAAC	Mehitable	Keziah	Abigail
1718	1720	1722-22	1723	1725	1727	1730	1733
		Jonathan	Ebenezer
		1735	1738

Died 1750

4TH GENERATION

CAPTAIN ISAAC COLBURN

5th Child of Capt. Joseph

Was commissioned Ensign in Capt. Samuel Colburn's Co. (Dedham Third Parish). Col. Jeremy Gridley's 1st Suffolk County Regiment, Apr. 16, 1766. Became its Captain under Col. Eliphalet Pond in 1771. Served in 1777 on a committee "to take into consideration all the services done in this precinct since April, 1775, respecting the present war", and received 10 s. for his own services. This must have included service at Lexington. In 1779, he was on a committee of three chosen "to reckon with the committee that was chose to hire men for the service of the war." Died 1817.

He married HEPZIBAH POND, of Dedham, and had

Hepzibah	Abigail	Eliphalet	ISAAC	Seth
1760	1762	1764	1766	1768

Hepsibah Pond was a small sized woman, was married at her father's house, and then her father, Col. Eliphalet Pond, lifted her to the horse behind her husband, saying, "Be good to her, Isaac". A large piece of the beautiful wedding dress of Hepzibah Pond's mother, Elizabeth Ellis, hangs framed in the Col. Eliphalet Pond homestead (now the Chickering Home for Convalescent Women, Washington St., Dedham).

5TH GENERATION

ISAAC COLBURN, JR.

4th Child of Capt. Isaac

Born Aug. 8, 1766—Died May 10, 1845

His notebook says, "Dec. 31, 1788. Began school at Northborough". "Mar. 24, 1789. Finished school at Northborough". "May 28, 1789. Then came to live at my Father's at Dedham, and Brought my wife there the 29th of June, 1789." "Dec. 21, 1789. Then began the school at Dedham." "Jan. 4, 1791. Then began school at Cutham." Some of his children went to school to him. Aunt Nabby brought some snow into school against his orders, and he rubbed her face with it. He first lived on the farm later occupied by his son, Isaacus. In 1812 he bought of his father for $3000, four lots of land, one having a dwelling house on it. He was selectman in 1802. Auditor on Treasurer's accounts, 1806 & 9 & 14. In 1794, he received the bounty of "One Shilling in full for one Crow." In 1800, "received $22.25 for warning the Town Officers and clearing out the canal in his pasture where the road runs". In 1802, "$29.20 in full for services as Selectman and Assessor, and a journey to Plymouth." In 1808, "$8.25 labour and spikes for new bridge". Also $2 "being a bounty voted by the town". In 1819, "$29.50 in full for his trouble and expense in removing Everett (Josiah) from Chesterville to this town". He used to make bird cages of wood and wire, selling them in Boston for a dollar apiece, containing linnets and goldfinches which he had trapped, wheelbarrows, sleds, and children's toys. He made trips to Canada to buy furs from the Indians.

His oldest daughter had a buffalo-skin foot-muff. He used to pop corn and sell it through the village, and is said to have introduced into Dedham rice pop corn. He was one of those who protested against placing the church on Nahatan Hill, and changed to the Baptist church in Medfield. He notified the parish that he would not pay his church tax, and when arrested for non-payment, lay stiff on the ground, and so compelled the officer to get assistance to carry him to the wagon, and stayed in jail one night as a protest before he paid it. One morning before daybreak, he heard a commotion among his cattle, and found a mad dog biting them—he seized a stake from his cart, and killed the dog before the stake broke into three pieces—the dog was found to have come from Bellingham. Seven or more cows were bitten, and all sorts of suggested remedies were tried, even burying some up to their necks, but none were saved. It is related that a travelling exhibitor of a trained moose once showed his animal's proficiency in jumping over a pole &c. to the Colburn children and when asked by the father how much he should pay, replied, "Nothing. It has been more fun for my moose to see your children than for your children to see my moose." (This story is often claimed for other large families).

When his grandchildren became too numerous to entertain in his house (still standing) at Thanksgiving, he originated the "Squantum Party" in August. He used to pay all tolls over Neponset Bridge, and provide rolls, &c. for the dinner. His carriage led in the return home, and then the others followed, in order of age. This grew to be a party of 125 to 150. Amory Fisher catered a great cauldron of clam chowder, and the other eatables were brought in family baskets. Swimming, boating and singing filled the social day, with a spice of Sam Curry's jokes, with Fred Bacon a close second. The party was reluctantly abandoned when the Boston sewer was put through Squantum, and in 1882 the last party of that generation was held on Uncle Isaacus' farm in West Dedham, but the sea shore flavor was lacking, and it was not repeated. But in 1917 the Jones cousins held a most enjoyable reunion in Young's Hotel, Boston, George M. Dimond presiding, and Mary A. Smith, secretary. Charles M. Cox presided at the Jones Family reunion there in 1920, and it was voted to invite in the other branches of the Colburn Family, and make it an annual affair. Accordingly in 1921 the Smith line and Richards line were represented, and more would have been if the weather had not been so severe. Edward J. Cox presided, and awarded as prize to Carrie Wheeler and Herbert A. Jones and wife as coming the longest distance, from Montezuma, Iowa, a photograph of Dana P. Colburn in a group of the Horace Mann Teachers' Institute Lecturers, also to Herbert E. Jones of Holliston Mass., for coming and bringing the largest number of his descendants. Notices of the 1922 reunion will be sent to all in due season.

The obituary of Isaac Colburn, Jr., in the Norfolk Democrat of Dedham, for May 16, 1845, says, "Died. In West Dedham, the 10th instant, Mr. Isaac Colburn 79; a man much respected and esteemed for his kind and benevolent disposition and real worth. He was the father of fifteen children, all of whom are living—twelve of them have been married. There are fifty one grandchildren, seven of whom are married. There are also eight great-grand-children, making seventy four regular descendants. These with those who have intermarried, make a round family of ninety two."

He married ELIZABETH DEXTER of Marlboro, and had

Elizabeth	Nabby	Isaacus	Polly	Hepzibah & Sally	Hannah	Caty
1789	1791	1793	1795	1797	1798	1800
	Lucy	John Dexter	Julia	Lyman R.
	1802	1804	1808	1809

  8. Kenneth Wheelock Abbott, born Apr. 6, 1891, resides Los Angeles, Calif.
7. EMMA FRANCES WHEELOCK, born Apr. 6, 1857, died Mar. 20, 1916, married Charles Henry Shattuck, and had
  8. Charles Henry Shattuck, Jr., born Jan. 1, 1890, married Bessie Haines, resides Los Angeles, Calif.
  8. Nathalie Shattuck, born Dec. 10, 1885, died Mar. 3, 1887.
  8. Charles Lloyd Shattuck, born Dec. 10, 1885, died Sept. 8, 1886.
7. SUSIE DANA WHEELOCK, born Oct. 5, 1861, resides Norwood.
6. MARTHA COLBURN, 14th child of Isaac, Jr., born Mar. 14, 1820, died Mar. 6, 1851. Never strong enough to be married. Was liberally provided for in her father's will.
6. DANA POND COLBURN, 15th child of Isaac, Jr., born Sept. 29, 1823, died Dec. 15, 1859. Was engaged to be married to Sally Luther, Dorchester, but was killed by being thrown out of his carriage on to the frozen ground by his young horse running away at the discharge of a gun. He was educated at the Bridgewater Normal School, and after teaching with success at Brookline, and elsewhere, he returned to Bridgewater Normal as teacher of mathematics. He was one of those teachers prominent in the campaign of Horace Mann to improve Massachusetts schools, and served him as lecturer on Mathematics at the Horace Mann Teachers' Institutes. A great punster, and very witty, he is said to have been the life of the party when these lecturers were waiting for trains, &c. He joined in the (at first) unsuccessful attempt to persuade the Massachusetts legislature to introduce into Massachusetts schools the then new methods of Arnold of Rugby, Pestalozzi, and Froebel, (object teaching instead of book memorizing, kindergartens, &c.), but impatient of waiting, went to Providence, R. I., and founded a private normal school, as its first principal. (One of his precepts was "Always be prepared. Never an apology"). A great success from the start, it soon attracted the attention of the R. I. legislators, who adopted it as a state normal school in its third year. At first located at Bristol, R. I., where Uncle Dana met his untimely early death, it is now the Rhode Island State Normal School at Providence. At the suggestion of one of his favorite pupils, Lydia Davenport (Colburn) Wellington, and anxious that his memory be kept alive, I presented his enlarged portrait to the R. I. Normal about 1900, with an account of his success there as told me by her. He made improvement in the use of decimals in teaching arithmetic, and published five arithmetic text books embodying his ideas which were adopted into the widely used arithmetics of his friend, George A. Walton. The people of West Dedham were much amused because the problems in Dana's arithmetics brought in the names of local families, Fisher, Ellis, Gay, &c. He was in constant correspondence with people all over the country, who sought his assistance in solving difficult mathematical problems. He was a wonderfully interesting lecturer, and associated with the greatest educational leaders of his day. An enthusiastic Mason, his funeral was carried out with the ceremonies of that order, a special car with about 100 prominent people of Rhode Island coming to South Dedham for the services. He rests with his Colburn ancestors, in the cemetery in West Dedham, now Westwood. One of the letters of condolence at his death, says, "Death for so fine a man." "The grave and sealed lips for so warm a heart." That he is not forgotten, is shown by the use of his name even to the present generation of Colburn descendants.
